DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 1-6 have invoked means plus function pursuant to 35 U.S.C. 112, sixth paragraph. Where means plus function language is used to define the characteristics of a machine or manufacture invention, claim limitations must be interpreted to read on only the structures or materials disclosed in the specification and "equivalents thereof." (Two en banc decisions of the Federal Circuit have made clear that the Office is to interpret means plus function language according to 35 U.S.C. 112, sixth paragraph. In the first, In re Donaldson, 16 F.3d 1189, 1193, 29 USPQ2d 1845, 1848 (Fed. Cir. 1994), the court held:

The plain and unambiguous meaning of paragraph six is that one construing means-plus-function language in a claim must look to the specification and interpret that language in light of the corresponding structure, material, or acts described therein, and equivalents thereof, to the extent that the specification provides such disclosure. In this case, the catcher means have invoked the means plus function limitations.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Art Unit: 1722

3. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

4. Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Eltvedt (4741687).

Eltvedt teaches a part catcher for a molding machine having two mold parts (50, 51), the part receiver and catching means (10) having side panels (16, 17) that are pivotable to one another via bracket members (33), the units are connected to the mold members at point (34), and units move from catching position (2b, 3b) when the molds are opened to release the products (37) and when the mold are closed, the units are moved into release position (2c, 3c) by forming an opening where the parts fall out.

Eltvedt fails to teach hands and shock absorbers.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to recognize that the side panels are equivalent to the hands that move into position to catch the articles. In regards to the shock absorbers, the fabric side panels allow for the equivalent function as shock absorbers.

In regards to claims 5, 12-14, and 20, the plurality of fingers are noted, however, the fabric side panels have the same equivalent function in collecting and releasing the parts.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Gunnels, Jr (3986811), Eltvedt (4295815), Rees (4118168), North (5439634).
